The longest and one of the most important planks in the platform is

The democratic party according whatever origin or creed who count themselves Americans to join in making it clear to all the world the unity and consequent power of America. In this day of test America must show itself, not a nation of partisans but a nation of patriots." Hyphenated Americanism is denounced in the following words:

"Whoever actuated by the purpose to promote the interest of a foreign power in this regard of our country's welfare or to injure this government in its foreign relations or cripple or destroy its industries at home and whoever by arousing prejudices of a racial, religious or other nature creates discord and strife among our people so as to obstruct the wholesome process of unification is faithless to the trust which the privileges of citizenship repose in him and is disloyal to his country."

Chairman Stone of the committee announced that the principal planks of the platform as agreed upon by the committee had been read to President Wilson over the telephone and the President had declared they were satisfactory.

Though the platform was announced as completed there was one question which was scheduled to be carried to the floor of the convention. This was in relation to women's suffrage. The committee fought out the equal suffrage pledge for hours. It defeated 20 to 22 a plank for a straight declaration in favor of a federal constitutional amendment to give women the vote. It adopted by a vote of 25 to 20 the following state-

"We recommend the extension of the franchise to the women of the country by the states upon the same terms as to men."

The language of the Mexican plank and of that referring to the democratic foreign policy were also stumbling blocks but there was expected to be little opposition to these two planks as framed.

Two years ago residents begin to report that the number of flies was diminishing and were prone to give the clean up campaign the benefit. Other persons who were skeptical as to the results of the movement for improved sanitary conditions said that "if there is anything in such campaigns we will know about it in a year or so." BRYAN TALKS TO CONVENTION

Wilson Put In Nomination by John W. Wescott-Marshall Put In Nomination by Senator Kern-Demonstrations Follow.

Convention Hall, St. Louis, June 16.-For President-Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey.

For Vice President-Thomas R Marshall of Indiana.

This ticket was renominated by the Democratic national convention in the coliseum here. The president was not literally nominated by acclamation. One delegates defiantly shouted 'No," when Chairman James put the question. This was Delegate at-Large Emmett R. Burke of Chicago.

It took the bloom off the rose. Senator James was obliged to announce the vote, 1,092 to 1. The renomination of Mr. Wilson was accomplished after a nominating speech by Judge John W. Wescott of New Jersey, and seconding speeches by James Harman of Ohio, and Governor Stuart of Virginia.

Vice President Marshall was renominated by acclamation. Delegate Burke having no objection. All opposition crumbled away-the candi dacies of Roger Sullivan of Illinois, Governor Mayor, Missouri, and Governor Moreland, Nebraska, having failed to enlist serious support. Mr. Marshall was placed in renomination by Senator John W. Kern of Indiana. There were no seconding speeches. The name of Ambassador James W. Gerard, who was endorsed by the New York delegation for vice president was not presented to the convention.

The Friday superstition had been deferred to, although it was a near thing. At 12:07 a. m. a committee was appointed to wait on the platform committee to see if it could get its report ready within reasonable time and so wind up all remaining convention work. It had been in session at the Planters' hotel since early Thursday morning.

son and Thomas R. Marshall came after it had been decided to reverse the original plan and keep the convention in session until Saturday by remaining in continuous session until it had renamed its standard bearers, adopt a platform and transact all other business that had brought the representatives of the party to St. Louis.

When the Democratic convention went into session the coliseum was jammed with humanity almost to the overflowing stage, with the expectation of spending most of the night listening to nominating and seconding speeches, choosing the standard bear er for 1916 and adopting a platform. When Permanent Chairman Ollie James pounded the gavel and started the machinery in motion for the windup of the convention business it was by common consent agreed that Vice President Marshall was just as certain of renomination as the president

Shortly after the convention assembled for its final session, a demand for a speech by William J. Bryan became so insistent that the convention, on motion of Senator Thompson, suspended the rules and called for the commoner to speak. A committee headed by Senator Kern escorted Mr. Bryan to the platform, while the galleries roared.

Chairman James introduced Mr Bryan as "one of the leading citizens of the world and America's greatest Flags and signs at headquarters tell that St. Louis has a convention. The delegate and alternate from his state New York state delegation has done its best in this respect with its large headquarters on the ground floor directly opposite the national committee's headquarters in the Jefferson. The delegation's name is flung across the whole building, yet in spite of it some persons were confused by a sign in quotation marks directly beneath it, "Prominent Democrats." But closer inspection showed that this was not a boast, but care about doing it. It is even whisan advertisement of a pamphlet on sale pered that the prizefight ordinances near by.

When Charles F. Murphy of Tammany Hall arrived he was the central figure in the Democratic convention crowd. He arrived from French Lick Springs, Ind., with Sheriff Alfred E. Smith, Senator Robert F. Wagner and Mr. Murphy did not spend much time about the hotel lobby. He played golf at French Lick, and he looks much more like an athlete than usual.

Senator Wagner also was busy meeting persons who said they were eager to shake hands with the new Tammany triumvirate-Messrs. Murphy, Smith and Wagner.

Man Without a Candidate.

Robert Emmet Burke, delegate at large from Illinois, is a man without a candidate. Elected as a delegate on a 'no preference" platform, Mr. Burke is in a quandary because it was certain the name of President Wilson is the only one that will be placed before the convention. Mr. Burke declined to say whom he would vote for, but his fellow delegates agree that his vote would never be recorded. Just in running up to the Jefferson from the Union station one is told two or three times that one is looking at the largest shoe manufacturing concerns in the United States. A tentative poll discloses twenty-four breweries. Either of these things might be true of Chicago if Chicago had thought of arranging it. But it takes a long walk to find twenty-four saloons, and that is where the difference begins. Between the Jefferson and the Coliseum there are many old fashioned residences, such as one sees in Richmond, and, though most of them have had shop fronts built into them, they give an air which even the Coliseum's name cannot make reminiscent of Chicago. And while the streets in one direction are numbered in the modern fashion the streets across are named. One of them is Locust street. St. Louis is linsey-woolsey of the old and

Hotels Are Busiest.

The pulse of a convention town must be felt in the hotels. In St. Louis one notices that more persons than usual are about, but they do not look more interesting or more interested than usual. And there is something that suggests that they have caught the southern atmosphere of this southern city. Even before so well appointed a hotel as the Marquette chairs line the sidewalk for lounging guests. At the Planters' House Colonel Carvel might still take his nightly three fingers of bourbon, except on Sunday night. And even before the Jefferson, which has no novelist's description to live up to, guests stand about

Bryan Acting as Reporter.

Some people at St. Louis illustrated the tedium they saw in store for them by saying that for the first time since 1896 William Jennings Bryan would not be in a position to get busy at a Democratic convention. But that is a superficial view of a strange circumthere is mighty little publicity meat in stance. The sight of Mr. Bryan at a Democratic convention, unable even to speak without a unanimous consent, is a spectacle not to be compared with anything Chicago had to offer.

Mr. Bryan failed to be elected a delegate, and only the joint proxy of a of Nebraska would entitle him to a seat and voice in the convention. He is at the convention, however, as a reporter, in which capacity he served at the Chicago convention also.

St. Louis has made unusual preparations for the entertainment of her guests, and St. Louis is just the right size for this kind of hospitality-big enough to do it well, small enough to were to be relaxed a little after the show for the benefit of Tammany's representatives, with their supposed hearty tastes. Bill Sapp a Modest Man.

It may be announced absolutely and exclusively that Colonel Bill Sapp, head of the Kansas delegation, positively would not accept the nomination for vice president and has never so much as thought of seeking the presidential nomination, at least not at the 1916 convention. Bill Sapp had started for the Jefferson elevator when he was flagged by a reporter, and he told the reporter so himself.

"But we have been told," Colonel dozen newspaper artists and was be- Sapp was informed, "that pressure will be brought to bear upon you, and therefore the convention will compel you to accept the vice presidency. > "I am unalterably against prohibition in any form, state or national, first, last and always!" cried Colonel Sapp, with vehemence. "And you may also say, my friend, that Colonel William F. Sapp of Galena, Kan., national committeeman from the great state of Kansas, a state, my friend, which geographically, metallurgically, agriculturally, intrinsically and as an actuality is the hub of this glorious Union -you may tell the culture and civilization in your state that, second to prohibition, Colonel Sapp of Galena is unutterably opposed to granting suffrage to the fair daughters, the wives, the mothers and the female sweethearts of this our glorious nation."

The chief amusement a delegate indulged in on arriving at St. Louis was inspecting the Coliseum at Washington and Jefferson avenues, a mile from the Hotel Jefferson.

The old Planters hotel, one of the most famous inns in the world, is a center for convention visitors. Many southern delegates, bowing to tradition, are at the Planters and sip their toddies and enjoy the fragrance of mint juleps.

It is generally accepted at St. Louis that the present intention of President Wilson is not to make any campaign trips, although he undoubtedly will make a number of speeches during the summer and autumn. He has accepted invitations to speak in New York on June 30 and St. Louis on July 4 at the dedication of the new headquarters of the American Federation of Labor. Probably he will go to Philadelphia on June 29 and to Detroit early in July for meetings of advertising men.

Mr. Wilson probably will receive official notification of his renomination at Shadow Lawn, the estate he has taken for the summer in New Jersey. Although he plans to remain in Washington until congress adjourns, probably he will make a brief visit to Shadow Lawn for the occasion.

An Ice Question For Business Men

O you have anyone in your employ who works 24 hours daily, for approximately 7 cents a day, and who performs an absolutely indispensable service?

No! You'd be mighty glad to have such an employe at ten times the cost, but it's beyond the bounds of possibility. And yet, right in your home, a cake of ice is working for you as no employe could or would! Therefore we say Ice keeps the food-stuffs in your ice box pure and wholesome. It preserves them through hot, sultry days. It protects the health of your entire family. It adds to your comfort. It costs you a few pennies each day - approximately 7, perhaps.

It performs a service that you MUST have. You can not get along without it. Ice works for you 24 hours every day at a ridiculously low cost. Why not give such a cheap and useful servant a real chance? Use plenty of ice,

New York, June 16.-A campaign for a "safety first Fourth of July," has been begun by the Safety First Federation of America. The federation has asked governors and other public officers to appeal to citizens for co-operation in the enforcement of the laws, to safeguard the lives of children and prevent the destruction of property by fire incidental to the observance of Independence day.

It is announced by the federation that more than twenty governors and the officers of 500 cities are co-operat-

What doubtedly will prevent this but the will be the outcome nobody knows. All this is taking it for granted the allies will be victorious.

If the central powers should win it is accepted as a foregone conelusion that:

Germany will keep Belgium, perhaps take enough of Holland to give the kaiser control of the Scheldt, gather in enough of northern France to secure Calais, regain all lost German colonies, annex Courland from Russia, wrest Singapore from England, as the gateway to the Orient, seize Indo-China from the French and establish Poland as a nominally self-governing kingdom under German domination.

It is taken for granted further that Old Serbia and Montenegro will become Austrian, that Bulgaria will get Macedonia and a big mouthful of the territory Greece took from Turkey, that Germany will become paramount in Roumania. Albania and Persia and that, through his overlordship of Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey, the Kaiser's rule will extend, in effect, as far as the Persian gulf. From Italy, Austria is expected to get the province of Venice.

Earlier in the war there was much talk of big money indemnities to be paid by the losing to the winning side. There isn't much of this talk now. Each side is convinced that it can't get what the other won't have for a long time after peace is restored.

FOREIGN POWERS INTERCEDE WILSON SELECTS M'CORMICK

Offer Their Friendly Offices to United States In Effort to Assist In Solving the Mexican Situation Without Resort to Arms.

Washington, June 16.—Following a series of conferences at the state department between Secretary of State Lansing and certain members of the diplomatic corps, Washington is full of rumors that some of the other powers have offered their friendly offices in an effort to assist the United States in solving the Mexican situation without resort to armed intervention.

The diplomatic representatives of Great Britain, Brazil, Honduras and Costa Rica were among those who talked with the secretary of state. All of these governments are anxious that there should be no armed intervention on the part of the United States-the Latin countries, because of their traditional distrust of the intentions of the United States. She continued to do this many days, but Paul, being grieved by even so good and true a testimony from such a source and knowing her to be controlled by an evil spirit, commanded the spirit to come out of her in the name of Jesus Christ, and he did. It was certainly strange to hear such a testimony from such a source, but an evil spirit in the synagogue at Capernaum one day when Jesus was present cried out, "I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God!" And Jesus commanded the spirit to come out of the man (Mark i, 23-26). Truth may be talked without being known in the heart, but the Lord reads the heart and does not want testimony from His enemies. Knowing the truth about the Lord Jesus does not save any one, yet it may be that many think they are saved because they believe that Jesus lived and died and rose again and that He is the Son of God. But it is he that hath the Son of God that hath life, and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life. Only such as receive Him become children of God (I John v, 12;

sus and put their trust in His great sacrifice as the Son of God, then one is apt to witness the enmity of the carnal mind against God.

How grand was the victory of faith in these men of God, who, with sore and bleeding backs and feet in the stocks, could praise the God whose they were and whom they served and talk with Him in heaven from their prison! Not only did the other prisoners hear them praising God, but they were heard in heaven, and suddenly the earth was shaken, and the prison, too; prison doors were opened and every one's bonds loosed (verses 25, 26). God, the God of Israel, who only doest wonders! (Ps. lxxii, 18, 19.) As some one has said, these men had not influence enough on earth at Philippi to save them from this shameful treatment (I Thess. ii, 2) and from prison, but they had influence enough in heaven to shake the earth. It was midnight when they prayed and sang praises, but the God of Israel neither slumbers nor sleeps; He watches over His people night and day (Ps exxi, 4; Isa. xxvii, 3). Not only was the prison shaken, but the keeper was so shaken when he saw the prison doors open that he would have killed himself if Paul had

The wedge south of the Dneister, which is thirty miles deep and thirty-five miles wide, isolates the Bukowina. Both wedges are steadily deepening and widening. The Austrians, however, are still holding in the Tarnpol district.

The Russians are confident that the success of their wings will have the desired effect upon the situation at Tarnopol. Czernowitz is regarded now as practically isolated not only from the rest of the Austrian forces, but also from Austria. The only commu nication still open is a light railway to Kutty and a line into Transylvania, which is not connected with the Austrian main railway system.

Violent fighting continues for the bridgehead of Czernowitz. These fortifications are on the right bank of the river, much higher than the left bank, which is in Russian hands. The attacking Russians are, therefore, completely exposed to the enemy's fire. The river at this point is nearly 200 yards wide and fourteen feet deep.

The Austrians are probably continuing to defend the town only with a view to protecting General Pflantzer's army. Czernowitz is being gradually

CHAPTER XII.

The Murder of Chevet

Who had killed him? What should I do? These were the two questions haunting my mind, and becoming more and more insistent. The light still burned in the mission house, and I could picture the scene within - the three priests reading, or talking softly to each other, and Cassion asleep on his bench in the corner, wearied with the day.

I could not understand, could not imagine a cause, and yet the assassin must have been D'Artigny. How else could I account for his presence there in the night, his efforts at concealment, his bending over the dead body, and then hurrying away without sounding an alarm. The evidence against the man seemed conclusive, and yet I would not condemn. There might be other reasons for his silence, for his secret presence, and if I rushed into the house, proclaiming my discovery and confessing what I had seen, he would be left without defense

Shrinking, shuddering . at every shadow, at every sound, my nerves throbbing with agony, I managed to drag my body up the logs, and in through the window. I was safe there, but there was no banishing from memory what I had seen-what I knew lay yonder in the wood shadow. I sank to the floor, clutching the sill, my eyes staring through the moonlight. had a ring of pleasure in it. "Ay! he

I do not know that I was called, yet when I awoke a faint light proclaiming the dawn was in the sky, and sounds of activity reached my and cramped from my unnatural position, but hastened to join the others. The morning meal was already on the table, and we ate as usual, no one mentioning Chevet, thus proving the body had not been discovered. I could scarcely choke the food down, anticipating every instant the sounding of an alarm. Cassion hurried, excited, no doubt, by the prospect of getting away on our journey, but seemed in excellent humor. Pushing back the box on which he sat he buckled his pistol belt, seized his hat and strode to the door.

"We depart at once," he proclaimed briefly. "So I will leave you here to bring the lady."

Pere Allouez, still busily engaged, murmured some indistinct reply and Cassion's eyes met mine. "You look pale and weary this morn-

"He is dead-the big man," he stammered. "He is there by the woods." "The big man-dead!" Cassion drew back, as though struck a blow. "What big man? Whom do you mean?" "The one in the second canoe, mon-

All were on their feet, their faces picturing the sudden horror, yet Cassion was first to recover his wits, and lead the way without. Grasping the soldier's arm and bidding him show where the body lay, he thrust him through the door. I lingered behind shrinking from being again compelled to view the sight of the dead man, yet unable to keep entirely away. Cassion stopped, looking down at the object on the grass, but made no effort to touch it with his hands. The soldier bent and rolled the body over, and one of the priests felt in the pockets of the jacket, bringing forth a paper or two. Cassion took these, gripping them in his fingers, his face appearing gray in the early light.

"Mon dieu! the man has been murdered," he exclaimed, "a dastard blow in the back. Look about and see if you find a knife. Had he quarrel with anyone, Moulin?"

The soldier straightened up.

"No, monsieur; I heard of none, though he was often rough and harsh of tongue to the men. Ah! now I recall, he had words with Sieur d'Artigny on the beach at dusk. I know not the cause, yet the younger man left him angrily and passed by where I stood, with his hands clinched."

"D'Artigny, hey!" Cassion's voice Once I thought I saw a man's indis- is a hothead. Know you where the young cock is now?"

> "True, so I did," he said at last. 'They were to depart before dawn. The villain is yonder—see; well off that farthest point, and 'tis too late to overtake him now. Sacre! there is naught for us to do, that I see, but to bury Hugo Chevet and go our waythe king's business cannot wait."

On the beach all was in readiness for departure, and it was evident enough that Moulin had already spread the news of Chevet's murder among his comrades. Cassion, however, permitted the fellows little time for discussion, for at his sharp orders they took their places in the canoes and pushed off. The priest was obliged to assume Chevet's former position, and I would gladly have accompanied him, but Cassion suddenly gripped me "No, monsieur," I managed to an in his arms, and without so much as swer quietly. "I slept ill, but shall be a word, waded out through the surf, and put me down in his boat, clambering in himself, and shouting his orders to the paddlers.

I think we were all of us glad enough to get away. I know I sat silent and motionless just where he placed me and stared back across the widening water at the desolate, dismal scene. How lonely and heartsickening it was, those few log houses against the hill, the blackened stumps littering the hillside, and the gloomy forest beyond. The figures of a few men were visible along the beach, and once I saw a black-robed priest emerge from the door of the mission house, and start down the steep path.

The picture slowly faded as we advanced, until finally the last glimpse of the log chapel disappeared in the haze, and we were alone on the mystery of the great lake, gliding along a bare, uninhabited shore. I was aroused by the touch of Cassion's hand on my own as it grasped the side of "Adele," he said, almost tenderly. Why should you be so serious? Cannot we be friends?"

My eyes met his in surprise. "Friends, monsieur! Are we not? Why do you address me like that?"

"Because you treat me as though I were a criminal," he said earnestly 'As if I had done you an evil in making you my wife. 'Twas not I who hastened the matter, but La Barre. 'Tis not just to condemn me unheard. yet I have been patient and kind. I thought it might be that you loved another-in truth I imagined that D'Artigny had cast his spell upon you: yet you surely cannot continue to trust that villain - the murderer of your

"At your orders, monsieur." "Ay, but the sergeant tells me the the body-yet he voiced no alarm." I was silent, and my eyes fell from his face to the green water. "'Twill be hard to explain," he went on. "But he shall have a chance."

"A chance! You will question him;

He hesitated whether to answer me, but there was a cruel smile on his

"Faith, I do not know. 'Tis like to be a courtmartial at the Rock, if ever we get him there; though the chances are the fellow will take to the woods when he finds himself suspected. No doubt the best thing I can do will be to say nothing until we hold him safe, though 'tis hard to pretend with such | he had found me place alone in his a villain."

He paused, as if hoping I might speak, and my silence angered him.

"Bah, if I had my way the young cockerel would face a file at our first camp. Ay! and it will be for you to decide if he does not."

"What is your meaning, monsieur?" "That I am tired of your play-acting; of your making eyes at this forest dandy behind my back. Sang dieu! I am done with all this-do you hear?and I have a grip now which will make you think twice, my dear, before you work any more sly tricks on me. Sacre, you think me easy, hey? I have life of the lad."

I had one glimpse of his face as he leaned forward, and there was a look in it which made me shudder and turn away. His was no idle threat, and ficient for any cruelty.

I realized the danger, the necessity for compromise, and yet for the moment I lacked power to speak, to question, fearful lest his demands would be greater than I could grant. I had no thought of what I saw, and still that which my eyes rested upon remains pictured on my brain, the spar- poration limits. kle of sun on the water, the distant green of the shore, the soldiers huddled in the canoe, the dark shining bodies of the Indians ceaselessly plying the paddles, and beyond us, to the left, another canoe, cleaving the water swiftly, with Pere Allouez' face turned guess our conversation. I was aroused its. by the grip of Cassion's hand.

"Well, my beauty," he said harshly, 'haven't I waited long enough to learn if it is war or peace between us?"

"'Tis not altogether true, and for that reason we are ordered to join the company. De Baugis has the right of it under commission from La Barre, but does not possess sufficient soldiers to exercise authority. La Salle's men remain loyal to De Tonty, and the Indian tribes look to him for leadership Mon dieu! it was reported in Quebec that 12,000 savages were living about the fort—ay! and D'Artigny said he doubted it not, for the meadows were covered with tepees-so De Baugis has small chance to rule until he has force behind him. They say this De Tonty is of a fighting breed—the savages call him the man with the iron handand so the two rule between them, the one for La Barre, and the other for La Salle, and we go to give the governor's man more power."

"You have sufficient force?" "Unless the Indians become hostile; besides there is to be an overland party later to join us in the spring and Sieur de la Durantaye, of the regi-

my yielding much more to preserve D'Artigny from immediate condemnation and death. The fellow had the power, and the inclination, and what good fortune saved me, I can never know. I think he felt a certain fear of me, a doubt of how far he might presume on my good nature.

Certainly I gave him small encouragement to venture further, and yet had he done so I would have been at my wit's end. Twice the words were upon his lips-a demand that I yield to his mastery-but he must have read in my eyes a defiance he feared to front, for they were not uttered. 'Twas that he might have this very talk that canoe, and I would have respected him more had he dared to carry out his desire. The coward in the man was too apparent, and yet that very cowardice was proof of treachery. What he hesitated to claim boldly he would attain otherwise if he could. I could place no confidence in his word, nor reliance upon his honor. (TO BE CONTINUED)

Long before SENRECO was offered to you we submitted it to hundreds of dentists, requesting that they put it to every test. Told them that we believed Senreco to be an unusually good dentifrice, especially as to its cleansing qualities and its remedial action on sore, soft, bleeding gums; in the treatment of Pyorrhea, etc. Submitted the formula and asked them their opinion. They tested Senreco from every angle; some going even so far as to make a chemical analysis-

Voted Yes

With practically one accord—said:

'Senreco appeals to me more than any dentifrice I have ever seen." "I cannot say too much for Senreco. It's one of the best I have used." "I can recommend Senreco as the best." "Makes the teeth glisten and is free from injurious ingredients, including pumice and grit." "I am indeed glad to get a tooth paste that does the work." "Congratulate you on formulating a dentifrice that gives one a new idea of mouth cleanliness, etc." (These quotations are from the dentists' reports. Originals on file at our office.)

With such endorsements from the men who know; why not go to your dealer today and get a tube of SENRECO -- 25c. Keep your teeth REALLY CLEAN, and protect yourself against Pyorrhea and decay. A copy of the folder, "The Most General Disease in the World" together with a liberal trial size tube of SENRECO will be mailed you for 4c in stamps. The Sentanel Remedies Co., Inc. Dept. Cathedral candles added a picturesqueness to the occasion. Harpist Sig. Montani cently by a cub bear near Loon lake played throughout the receiving hours and during the ceremony.

Mrs. Roy Metzger, of this city, with Miss Imo Brendel presiding at the piano, sang "At Dawning" (Cadman), and "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," (Moore), the harpist then playing Mendelssohn's Wedding March for the approach of the bridal party. Little John Marcus Harvey, nephew of the bride, came first scattering rose petals before the bridal party. The little ring bearer, came next carrying the rings in a French basket of pink roses. The bride came next leaning upon the arm of her brother Ernest Harvey, who gave her in marriage. The groom and the minister. Rev. H. C. Weston met the party at the altar. The double ring marriage service was impressively read by the Rev. Mr. Weston. During the ceremony Harpist Montani played "Tales of Hoffman" (Offenbach), changing to a medley of bridal airs after the ceremony and during the serving of the dinner which followed.

The bride was beautifully gowned in a sheer combination of silk and lace, made over a double foundation of white silk net. Her dress was made short and she wore hoops. A bridal veil caught with roses and a corsage bouquet completed the details. The little flower girl who is a niece of the bride, wore a dainty pink dress, being a miniature of the bride's gown, and also wore hoops Master John Marcus Harvey, who scattered the rose petals, wore a white military suit.

The groom is the son of Allen Swope, postmaster of Seymour, Ind., and is connected with his father in his numerous business enterprises at Seymour. He is a member of Phi Delta fraternity.

After the ceremony the bride and groom departed in their auto for an extensive trip east.

A bridal dinner of five courses was served at small tables throughout the Harvey home. The bride's table was elaborately decorated and her special friends were seated with her. A large bride's cake placed upon a bed of pink roses centered the table, and was cut by the bride.

According to Sorchych, the machine was to be operated by placing a $20 bill in an aperture and turning a crank. Scores of duplicate certificates came forth. Three thousand were "made" in two weeks. Armed with a shotgun, he is said to have guarded his machine for three days after the men left. He then discovered the device would not work without more bills and brought into which Fatty Spilliker's, manufactured a splendid looking cake into which Fatty greatly desired to place his sound, strong teeth. But id him that while the cake was made specially for him he was not to y till supper, then share it with the others.

"No. I won't touch it. Olga. I won't even look at it until supper time. I'm going over to Kitty and Danny's and tell them about it." No one ever knew that Percy had got into their kitchen and swiped their cake, but you can see for yourself that's where it went.

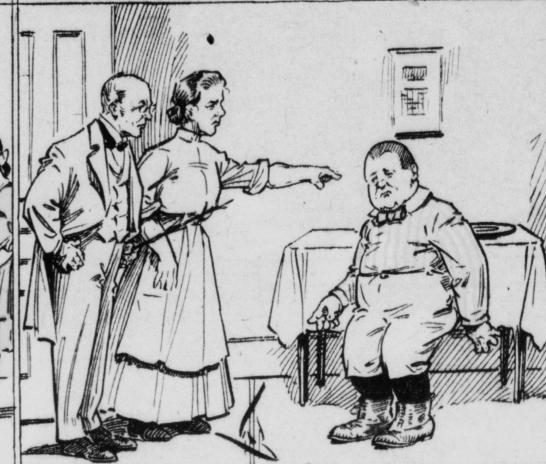

Over at Kitty and Danny's pretty much the time thing happened. They also promised not to molest the dainty until the proper time.

And they also started to tell Fatty Spilliker of their excellent good for-And in the background again that awful Percy. Did he simply "sense" and could he possibly eat so much? He did and he could.

They couldn't find Patty at his home, but returning found him in their kitchen being accused by indignant Mary of purloining the cake. Well, no one else had been there and the cake was gone, and though the evidence was only circumstantial, yet the black clouds of suspicion lowered.

Deeply embittered by this cruel wrong, he came sadly home to be cenfronted in the bosom of his own family by a similarly false accusation of an exactly similar nature. Young and fat, old and lean, all may suffer the bitter injustice of this world.
